IN CONGRESS, July 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, in such a case, dictates that慎重 should be exercised; and that no step should be undertaken which is fraught with the danger of inviting the resentment of the rest of the world, by showing them, that they are the objects of scorn and ridicule, in consequence of the folly and impudence of the dissolvers of the former alliance.

The United States in Congress assembled, declaring that the thirteen united States of America, do hereby sever all political connections with Great Britain, that they are free, independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all connections heretofore existing between them and the said Kingdom, are hereby totally dissolved; that the Colonies, by the declaration of this Independence, have assumed the name and character of free, independent States, that they are entitled to send Ministers to Congress, and to all other public assemblies, and to enter into all other political connections with the world, as free, independent States, and that they are entitled to the same rights and privileges as the most powerful of the European States, in respect to their external relations, and in respect to their internal government.

Resolved, That the thirteen united States of America, do hereby sever all political connections with Great Britain, that they are free, independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all connections heretofore existing between them and the said Kingdom, are hereby totally dissolved; that the Colonies, by the declaration of this Independence, have assumed the name and character of free, independent States, that they are entitled to send Ministers to Congress, and to all other public assemblies, and to enter into all other political connections with the world, as free, independent States, and that they are entitled to the same rights and privileges as the most powerful of the European States, in respect to their external relations, and in respect to their internal government.

Resolved, That the thirteen united States of America, do hereby sever all political connections with Great Britain, that they are free, independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all connections heretofore existing between them and the said Kingdom, are hereby totally dissolved; that the Colonies, by the declaration of this Independence, have assumed the name and character of free, independent States, that they are entitled to send Ministers to Congress, and to all other public assemblies, and to enter into all other political connections with the world, as free, independent States, and that they are entitled to the same rights and privileges as the most powerful of the European States, in respect to their external relations, and in respect to their internal government.

IN CONGRESS, July 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, in such a case, dictates that慎重 should be exercised; and that no step should be undertaken which is fraught with the danger of inviting the resentment of the rest of the world, by showing them, that they are the objects of scorn and ridicule, in consequence of the folly and impudence of the dissolvers of the former alliance.

The United States in Congress assembled, declaring that the thirteen united States of America, do hereby sever all political connections with Great Britain, that they are free, independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all connections heretofore existing between them and the said Kingdom, are hereby totally dissolved; that the Colonies, by the declaration of this Independence, have assumed the name and character of free, independent States, that they are entitled to send Ministers to Congress, and to all other public assemblies, and to enter into all other political connections with the world, as free, independent States, and that they are entitled to the same rights and privileges as the most powerful of the European States, in respect to their external relations, and in respect to their internal government.

Resolved, That the thirteen united States of America, do hereby sever all political connections with Great Britain, that they are free, independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all connections heretofore existing between them and the said Kingdom, are hereby totally dissolved; that the Colonies, by the declaration of this Independence, have assumed the name and character of free, independent States, that they are entitled to send Ministers to Congress, and to all other public assemblies, and to enter into all other political connections with the world, as free, independent States, and that they are entitled to the same rights and privileges as the most powerful of the European States, in respect to their external relations, and in respect to their internal government.

Resolved, That the thirteen united States of America, do hereby sever all political connections with Great Britain, that they are free, independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all connections heretofore existing between them and the said Kingdom, are hereby totally dissolved; that the Colonies, by the declaration of this Independence, have assumed the name and character of free, independent States, that they are entitled to send Ministers to Congress, and to all other public assemblies, and to enter into all other political connections with the world, as free, independent States, and that they are entitled to the same rights and privileges as the most powerful of the European States, in respect to their external relations, and in respect to their internal government.

You might suppose that we are brothers.
Aren't we all fragments of the cosmos,
Tumbling through space arm in arm?
Joined for strength against the vacuum's wind
And knotted with the bonds of preservation?

Hell no . . .

We drift apart within our space,
Find our answers within ourselves
Even though we are amazingly lost
In trillions of light years,
Great yawning gulfs of ages,
Monstrous bellowing swirls of mass.
We are free; independent, we say,
And heed not the boiling, raging, convulsing
Pulse of this universe.

What power the pulse that barely throbs
Beneath the pressed thumb
In a cosmos heaved forever outward?
What power all the pulses of all the life
In all the world against the hollow song
Of endless night?

The forever echo of an explosion that scattered worlds?
The forever echo of all the howling death that was ever torn from life?
The forever echo of Christ, Elil Elil, on his cross?
The forever echo of fusing suns and bursting galaxies?

And yet we gall to stand apart
And attempt to answer all from the cosmos within.
We ride the sea this way,
Our own peculiar sea that makes its waves
In this dark static at the fringe of
The universal consciousness;
The waves, too, echoes of power
As we all are echoes of some power
And brothers by our very diminutive presence
Together
On the periphery
Of God's exploded memory.

I can't wait to unleash those on the road.
 Here, my friends, is a drummer. I found Conrad in a club and he found Fuzz
 for me.

"We Are Not Helpless" is not an answer or put-down to Neil's "Helpless."
 The line "We Are Not Helpless/We Are Men" comes from Failsafe, the book.
 Spiro Agnew took out after us, actually attacked us personally, the songwriters, when he said, "Those guys damaging the minds of our kids blah blah blah," "Insidious forces and on and on."
 An F.C.C. man slapped him right in the face and said, "Well I guess that's because they're not writing campaign songs for him." So I mean the American people have a few instincts that let's hope we can continue to use. A lot of people will rationalize that the Jerry Rubins are necessary and I don't buy it. What I saw awakened by Jerry Rubin I don't wanna see 'awakened. And now in front of the British people, I mean—wow, I mean in
